THIS REPORT PRESENTS THE TABULATIONS AND ANALYSES OF RESPONSES TO EACH ITEM OF THE PRINCIPAL QUESTIONNAIRE THAT WAS ADMINISTERED AS PART OF THE EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES SURVEY. THE ITEM ANALYSES OF THESE DATA WERE CONDUCTED (1) TO PRESENT THE NUMBER AND PERCENTAGE OF ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY SCHOOL PRINCIPALS RESPONDING TO EACH ITEM ALTERNATIVE, (2) TO DETERMINE THE NUMBER WHO FAILED TO RESPOND, (3) TO DEVELOP CODES FOR FUTURE ANALYSES, AND (4) TO GUIDE AN ESTIMATE OF MISSING DATA. THE SAMPLE CONSISTED OF 2,348 ELEMENTARY SCHOOL AND 1,032 SECONDARY SCHOOL PRINCIPALS. THE FINDINGS SELECTED FOR DISCUSSION IN THE REPORT ARE--(1) ONLY 3-4 PERCENT OF THE PRINCIPALS, BOTH ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY, JUDGED THE REPUTATION OF THEIR SCHOOL TO BE BELOW AVERAGE OR INFERIOR, (2) SCHOOLS JUDGED AS HAVING A GOOD REPUTATION WERE LARGER THAN THOSE FELT TO HAVE AN AVERAGE REPUTATION, AND ALSO WERE MORE URBAN IN LOCATION, (3) PRINCIPALS IN SCHOOLS JUDGED AS HAVING A GOOD REPUTATION RECEIVED HIGHER SALARIES, (4) THE BETTER THE REPUTATION OF THE SCHOOL, THE HIGHER THE SOCIOECONOMIC STATUS OF THE FAMILIES OF THE PUPILS WAS FELT TO BE, (5) PRINCIPALS WHO HAD ATTENDED A PRIVATE UNIVERSITY OR COLLEGE RECEIVED A SLIGHTLY HIGHER ANNUAL SALARY THAN THOSE WHO HAD ATTENDED A PUBLIC ONE, AND (6) THOSE PRINCIPALS WHO HAD ATTENDED PRIVATE UNIVERSITIES OR COLLEGES TENDED TO LEAD SCHOOLS THAT WERE MORE URBAN THAN RURAL AND SCHOOLS THAT WERE LARGER. THE REPORT PRESENTS THE TABULATION OF EACH OF THE APPROXIMATELY 100 QUESTIONS ON THE SURVEY. (DK)

Item Response Analyses of the Educational Opportunities Survey Principal Questionnaire

Introduction and Purpose

The following report presents the tabulations and analyses of responses to each item from the principal questionnaire that was administered as part of the Educational Opportunities Survey (EOS). These tabulations and analyses were conducted in order to:

(1) Present the number and percent of elementary and secondary principals responding to each questionnaire item alternative;

(2) Determine the number of elementary and secondary principals who failed to respond to each item;

(3) Serve as a guideline in developing codes to scale each of the items for future analyses; and

(4) Serve as a guideline in estimating missing data.

Format and Tabulations

Table 1 shows the format used for the tabulations presented in the main body of this report. The actual question that is being analyzed from the questionnaire is presented at the top along with the various response alternatives labeled (A), (B), and (C) in the table. The tabulations presented on the left are for the elementary principals' responses and on the right are the responses of the secondary principals.

In addition, four items from the principal questionnaire were used for additional information on each of the remaining questionnaire items. These four items were coded, as described below, and utilized as the criteria for an analysis of the remaining questionnaire items. The four items so utilized were:

Item Number 40 - measuring the total enrollment in the principal's school,

Item Number 71 - the salary of the principal,

Item Number 72 - the location of the school based on a rural-urban dimension,

Item Number 73 - a description of the pupils served by the school in terms of their parent's occupations.

The average scale score on each of these criterion items was computed for each of the response alternatives of the questionnaire items under consideration. Thus, for each questionnaire item there are eight tabulations, one each for the eight possible combinations of elementary or secondary principals on items number 40, 71, 72 and 73.

Within each tabulation, several elements of information are given. Under the column labeled CATEGORY the possible response alternatives are listed. Thus, category 1 refers to the first response alternative, labeled (A) in the questionnaire item listed above, category 2 refers to response alternative (B), etc., and category 0 contains information as to those principals who failed to respond to the item. The column labeled NUMBER gives the number of principals in the sample who chose each response alternative (categories 1, 2, or 3 in the sample illustration) and those who failed to respond (cagegory 0). A principal was identified as being elementary or secondary depending upon his response to a question concerned with the highest grade included in the school (question number 2 in the list of questions). Principals who said the highest grade in their school was eight or less were classified as elementary. Similarly, principals who said their highest grade was 9 or greater were classified as secondary. The reader will note that there were a total of 2,348 elementary and 1,032 secondary principals in the sample. These values were then inflated using sample weights to estimate the number of elementary and secondary principals in the population. These values are given in the column labeled WEIGHTED NUMBER. The reader will note that there is an estimated total of 57,589 elementary and 23,264 secondary principals.

The percent of the total number responding to each alternative was computed from the WEIGHTED NUMBERS and is given in the column labeled WEIGHTED PERCENTAGE. These percentages sum to a total of 100 for the elementary and for the secondary principals.

There were different sets of sampling weights used in the EOS study depending upon the particular population values that were to be reproduced. Thus, there are sets of sampling weights to reproduce student population values for the different grade levels and sets of weights to reproduce school population values. Since the principals are part of the schools, the school sampling weights were used to reproduce the population values for the principals.

The columns labeled ITEM XX, MEAN and STD. DEV. give the mean and standard deviation of the criterion item (identified by item number) for each response alternative for the questionnaire item under analysis.

As an example, consider question 59 in the main body of the report. Of the 2,348 elementary principals in the sample, 1,633 indicated that they were male, 676 indicated they were female and 39 failed to respond.

Using the school sampling weights to inflate these values it is noted that there are an estimated 41,042 male and 15,592 female elementary principals. In percentage values, 71.3 percent are male and 27.1 percent of the elementary principals are female. Also, 1.7 percent failed to respond to this item. More information is gained by looking at the next column. This tabulation is based on the criterion variable number 40 which asked about the total enrollment in the principals' schools. For those elementary school principals who indicated that they were male, the average enrollment of their schools was 458.037 while for those elementary principals who indicated they were female the average enrollment was 317.339. A tendency which may be indicated here is that a male elementary principal may be the administrator of a larger elementary school than his female counterpart. At this point it should be mentioned that the reader should not assume causal relationships in any of these analyses. The results may be due to the interaction of many complex factors.

Some information regarding the non-respondents can also be obtained. Even though the percentage of elementary principals who did not respond to this item is small, 1.7 percent, it may be noticed that they tend to be principals of elementary schools with small enrollment as compared to those principals who responded to this item.

GRID ITEM ERROR REDUCTION AND CODING PROCEDURES OF CRITERION VARIABLES AND OTHERS

Several of the items or questions in the principal questionnaire need additional comments as to how the response alternatives were categorized and the reasons for the scaling procedure utilized.

Six of the items in the questionnaire used a gridding procedure. In this procedure a principal was to insert, as his response, an exact value or number as opposed to marking a category that would include a range of values. The items that were gridded were number 8, the number of school days in session; number 11, the number of instructional rooms; number 12, the number of improvised rooms used for instructional purposes; number 26, the number of teachers in the school; number 40, the total enrollment of school; and number 41, the number of 12th grade graduates.

Grid Item Error Reduction

Preliminary analyses of item responses against total enrollment in the school (#40) showed that there was an inordinately large variability associated with any one item alternative. This suggested that there were a great many errors in all of the gridded items. In order to verify this assumption selected items from the principal tape were printed out for each school. This print out contained all of the gridded items and in addition some items that were shown to be correlated with the number of students enrolled in a school (that is, school size). Project TALENT in it's studies of "The American High School" (see Flanagan, et.al. in the List of References) found that the number of grades included in a school, its rural-urban location, the principal's salary, whether or not there was an accelerated curriculum and whether or not some system of grouping or tracking was employed were all related to the number of students enrolled in the school. Accordingly these items were also printed out for each school in the hope that they would be useful in correcting the gridded items that are associated with size, such as number of instructional rooms (#11), number of teachers in the school (#26) and the total enrollment of the school (#40). In addition to this information, data were also available on the number of students tested at each of grade level 1, 3, 6, 9 and 12. Thus, a school that has all 12 grade levels would have information on the number of students in all of the above 5 grades tested whereas a four year high school would have information on the number of students tested in it's 9th and 12th grades. Information was also available on the number of teachers in each school who returned a teacher questionnaire.

This information was used to correct the gridding errors for the number of instructional rooms (#11), the number of teachers in the school (#26) and the number of students enrolled in the school (#40). Sufficient information was not available to correct the other gridded items.

Many of the errors were very readily corrected. These usually involved some zero columns that were filled in when they should not have been. For example, a gridded answer of 3,400 for the number of students enrolled could readily be corrected to 340 or 34 depending upon the other information available. At the other extreme were answers that made no sense either by themselves or in reference to the other information available. For example a school with 9,000 students was immediately suspect and although infrequent was usually ascertained to be a 90 or a 900 depending upon the other information.

When a principal failed to answer a gridded item an answer was generated for him on that item using the other available data. For example, if the other data looked correct but an answer had not been given for the number of rooms, an answer was generated by assuming that there was approximately one classroom for each teacher. In like manner it was assumed that there was approximately one teacher for every twenty-eight students. Only when there was no other information available was a response not generated for a blank.

A tally of the number of these kinds of changes that were made for each school are as follows:

Gridded Items	Number of Schools for Which a Change Was Made
#11 Number of instructional rooms	217
#26 Number of teachers	73
#40 Number of students enrolled	104
Both #11 and #26	15
Both #11 and #40	8
Both #26 and #40	16
All three (#11, #26 and #40)	77
Total	510

Changes were made for 510 of the 3,380 schools included in the sample. Thus, 15 percent of the schools had one or more errors in these three gridded items.

Coding Procedures

Following is a description of the manner in which different items were coded for use in these analyses.

Question number 8, which asked for the number of school days in session, resulted in 12 categories as can be seen from the tabulations in the main body of this report. The actual values associated with each category are as follows:

Category	Value
1	173 days
2	174 "
3	175 "
4	176 "
5	177 "
6	178 "
7	179 "
8	180 "
9	181 "
10	182 "
11	183 "
12	184 " or more
0	No response

There were 35 categories or response alternatives developed for item number 11 which asked for the number of instructional rooms in the school. Responses of zero or one were tabulated as alternative number 1, two or three rooms were tabulated as alternative number 2. This grouping of 2 was continued through response alternative 30, which indicated fifty-eight or fifty-nine instructional rooms. The alternatives 31 through 34 included increments of 4, and response alternative 35 included those principals who responded as having 80 or more instructional rooms.

Question number 12 asked the principal to grid the number of improvised rooms that were used for instructional purposes. The gridded responses were then categorized into 12 response alternatives. Category number 1 indicated zero number of improvised rooms, number 2 indicated one room, number 3 indicated two rooms, etc., to where category 12 indicated eleven or more rooms.

Item number 26, which asked for the number of teachers in the school, was categorized as to response alternatives in the same manner as item number 11, resulting in 35 response alternatives.

Question 40 asked for the total enrollment of students in the school. The gridded responses of the principals were grouped into 40 intervals, each interval of a width of 50. The 41st interval included a grid response of 2,000 or more students. Each category or interval was then assigned the midpoint value of the interval, e.g., category or interval number 1 had as its value 25, interval 2 was valued at 75, etc., up to interval or category 40 which had a value of 1,975. Category number 41 was given a value of 2,200. The midpoint values were used for the calculations necessary when this item was analyzed as the independent variable against other items in the questionnaire (such as Principal's Salary #71) and the raw or uncoded number of students was used when this item was used as the dependent variable.

Question number 41 asked for the number of students who graduated from the 12th grade the previous year. The gridded responses were then categorized into intervals of 10; interval or category 1 included 0 - 9 graduates and continued up to category 56 which included 550 or more graduates.

Three additional items were scaled, i.e., the response alternatives were assigned certain values since the items were utilized in the analyses as criterion variables. These items were #71, #72, and #73.

Question 71 requested the principal to indicate his annual salary received from the school system by responding to one of the ten salary interval alternatives. The midpoint of each interval was then utilized.

in the computations when this item was used as a criterion variable. The midpoints of the response alternatives were, in ascending order: $3500, $4500, $5500, $6500, $7500, $8500, $9500, $13,500, $17,500 and $20,500.

Scale values were assigned to each response alternative of item #72 which attempted to measure the location of the school on a rural-urban continuum. The scale values and their respective descriptive phrases were as follows:

Scale Value	Description of Location
1	In a rural area
2	In a small town (5,000 or less)
3	In a city of 5,000 to 50,000
4	In a residential suburb
5	In an industrial suburb
6	In a residential area of a larger city (50,000+)
7	In the inner part of a larger city (50,000+)

A description of the pupils served by the school was measured by questionnaire item #73. The response alternatives were scaled on a dimension of rural to blue collar to white collar family occupations as follows:

Scale Value	Description of Pupil Background
1	Children of rural families
2	All children of factory and blue collar workers
3	Mostly children of factory and other blue collar workers
4	Children from a general cross-section of the community
5	Mostly children of professional and white collar workers
6	All children of professional and white collar workers

The remainder of this report discusses some selected findings and presents the tabulated results of the analyses. Many of these results also appear in a different form in Chapter 2 of the report by Coleman and others entitled, EQUALITY OF EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITY (see Coleman, et.al., 1966 in the List of References). The numbers and percentage responses for each item alternative as well as the average scores based on the criterion items are presented here for the first time. These analyses represent part of a series of analyses being conducted as follow-on studies of the EOS data and will result in the development of indices to be used in a wide variety of special studies.

DISCUSSION OF SOME SELECTED RESULTS

It is interesting to note when looking at the tabulations of responses to item number 69 (see Tables 2 - 5), which requested the principals to judge the general reputation of their schools among other educators in the area, that approximately 38 percent of both elementary and secondary principals judged that the reputation of their schools placed them "among the best" and roughly 32 percent judged that they were seen as being "better than average." Of the elementary principals, 21 percent judged their reputation to be "about average" and 24 percent of the secondary principals judged their reputation to be "about average." Only 3 - 4 percent of the principals, both elementary and secondary, judged that the reputation of their schools was below average or inferior.

For both elementary and secondary principals, there seems to be a relationship between the size of the school based on total enrollment and the reputation that the principal felt the school had among other educators in the area (see Table 2.) The size of the schools that were seen as having a reputation of being among the best tended to be the larger schools, their average size being ranked at or near the top. The schools which were seen by their principals as being of average reputation had the smallest average enrollment. It is questionable whether any interpretation should be made about those schools whose principals judged their reputation as being below average or inferior since they comprised such a small proportion of the total number of the schools in the sample.

This same pattern tended to hold true when the response alternatives were ranked according to the average salary of the principals responding to each alternative (see Table 3.) The average salary of both the elementary and secondary principals was higher for those principals who judged that the reputation of their schools placed it among the best, with the next lower average salary level for those principals who judged the reputation of their schools as being better than average. The lowest average salary level was received by those principals who had judged that their schools had about an average reputation among other educators in the area. Again, little can be said for the other response alternatives since the number of principals responding with one of these alternatives was relatively small.

Interpretation of the means within each response alternative that describes the location of the school (item #72) is somewhat difficult. The scale dimension is on a continuum from "rural area" to "small town" to "city under 50,000" to "residential" and then "industrial" suburbs to "residential area of large city" and then to "inner part of large city" at the upper end of the continuum. Looking at Table 4 where the mean value of the variable "location of school" has been computed for each response alternative to question 69, it would not be proper to say that the principals who had judged the reputation of their school to be better than average were located in a school within a city of from 5,000 to 50,000 in population. A better method of interpreting this data would be to maintain a relative orientation to the overall rural-urban dimension, then compare all the response alternatives together. Those schools that were seen as having a better reputation were, on the average, more urban in their location than those schools who were seen as having a lower reputation. Again, only those three response alternatives which received the large majority of choices are considered in this statement.

The same method of interpretation should be utilized when question 73 is compared to the various response alternatives. The scale utilized in this situation was basically a description of pupils served by the school in terms of the parents' general occupational categories. The lower end of the scale, or the scale value of 1 refers to children of rural families. The scale then moves through "all" to "mostly" children of factory and blue collar workers, then a general cross section and on to "mostly" and then "all" children of professional and white collar workers. This scale may also be likened to a measure of socio-economic status of the community or neighborhood that the school serves. One of the usual measures of socio-economic status is the occupation of the father. Generally, that seems to be what this particular item is also measuring.

Referring to Table 5, the results should be interpreted in much the same manner as previously described above. One would avoid a direct statement such as the better than average school was comprised of children from mostly factory and blue collar worker families. A better interpretation would be that the better the reputation of the school was, as seen by the principal, the higher or more white collar oriented were the families of the pupils. This tendency existed for both elementary and secondary schools.

Type of Undergraduate Institution Attended

Another questionnaire item of possible interest was the one which requested the principals to indicate the undergraduate institution that they attended, item number 62 from the principal questionnaire. This analysis again computed the average size of school, salary of the principal, rural-urban location scale value, and pupil description scale value for each response alternative. These computations have been summarized from the main body of this report and are presented in Tables 6 through 9.

As can be seen from these tables, over 96 percent of both elementary and secondary principals attended public or private universities or colleges, or a public normal school or teachers college. Less than one percent attended only junior colleges or some other institution and only 2.4 percent responded as having attended a private normal school or teachers college. About one percent of both elementary and secondary principals did not respond to this item.

Seventy-five percent of the elementary principals attended public institutions as compared with 70 percent of the secondary principals. Conversely, more secondary principals attended private universities or colleges than elementary principals.

Another combination of interest was the proportions who attended universities or colleges as opposed to normal schools or teachers colleges. Of the elementary principals, 55 percent attended a university or college while 63 percent of the secondary principals attended a university or college. Again, more elementary principals attended normal schools or teachers colleges than secondary principals, proportionately.

An interesting comparison between principals and teachers was possible, since the identical item was included in the teacher questionnaire. Table 10 is an abstract of the data from the teacher questionnaire which was presented in another note (see Mayeske, et. al. 1967, in the List of References.) Although the rank order of the percentages remained the same between principals and teachers, the actual proportions of teachers who received their undergraduate training at the different types of institutions discussed so far differed from the proportions for the principals. There was very little difference among the proportions of teachers who attended the three major categories of institutions; about 1/3 of the teachers had attended public universities and approximately the same proportion attended private universities and normal schools or teachers colleges. Of the elementary teachers, a somewhat greater proportion had attended public normal schools or teachers colleges and about equal proportions attended private and public universities or colleges.

Since less than 5 percent of responses of the principals, both at the elementary and secondary levels, indicated attendance at other than a university, college or public normal school or teachers college, only the high response categories or response alternatives have been included in the discussion that follows.

Comparing the mean salary level for each response alternative (see Table 7) seemed to show a similar trend for both elementary and secondary principals. Those principals who had attended a private university or college received a slightly higher annual salary, on the average, than their counterparts who had attended a public university or college. Also, those principals who had attended a normal school or teachers college received a smaller annual salary, on the average, than principals who attended a university or college, private or public. Secondary school principals, generally, receive a larger salary than elementary school principals.

Looking at Table 7 where the average enrollment of the principal's school is computed for each response alternative, the same pattern occurs as was observed for principals' salary. For both elementary and secondary principals, the principals who had attended a private university or college tended to be the administrator of a larger school, on the average, than the principal who had attended a public institution. The administrator who had attended a normal school or teachers college had the smaller enrollment, on the average. As can be seen by the total averages, the secondary school principal was the administrator of a school that was almost twice as large in terms of enrollment as the principal of an elementary school. This is an obvious fact, since there were usually several elementary schools that fed students into a single secondary school.

Interpretation of the means that describe the location of the school within each response alternative is somewhat difficult. As described above, the reader must remember that this is a scale of rural to urban. Looking at Table 8 where the mean value of the rural to urban location of school has been computed for each response alternative, it seemed that those elementary principals who attended a public teachers college or normal school were slightly less urban in their location than those principals who had attended a public university or college. Those principals who had attended private universities or colleges were more urban in their location than either of the other two classifications. For secondary principals those who had attended private universities or colleges were located in a more urban area than those principals who had attended public institutions. The difference between the mean location values of the two classifications of public institutions under discussion seemed to be small enough so as to assume that there may not be any actual difference between them.

There are too many tabulations to discuss each one individually; however, the reader may find many relationships in these analyses that are of particular interest to him. The reader is cautioned not to attribute causation to the differences in salary, size, location of school or pupil characteristics for the item responses. Where trends or differences occur, only a relationship may exist with the differences possibly due to many different interacting factors.
